

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Tsuneki Hori

Inter-American Development Bank, Washington, DC, USA

Rajib Shaw

Graduate School of Global Environmental Studies, Kyoto University, Kyoto, Japan

Tsuneki Hori is currently disaster risk management specialist of the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) in Washington, DC, USA. He has more than 15 years of professional experiences on the field of disaster risk management (DRM) in Latin American region. His experiences include public policy dialogues with national authorities, country programming, project formulation and execution, and post-project monitoring and evaluation. He is a principal technical coordinator of the Regional Policy Dialogue on DRM and Climate Change Adaptation (CCA) of the IDB. He holds Ph.D. degree from the Graduate School of Global Environmental Studies at Kyoto University.

Rajib Shaw is a Professor in the Graduate School of Global Environmental Studies of Kyoto University, Kyoto, Japan. He worked closely with the local communities, NGOs, governments and international organization, including United Nations, especially in the Asian countries. He is currently the Chair of the United Nations Asia Regional Task Force for Urban Risk Reduction. His research interests are: community-based disaster risk management, climate change adaptation, urban risk management, and disaster and environmental education.