ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Jonathan Bundy (jonathan.bundy@asu.edu) is an Associate Professor of Management in the W. P. Carey School of Business at Arizona State University. He received his PhD from the University of Georgia. His research investigates the social and cognitive forces that shape organizational behavior, with a focus on social evaluations, crisis management, stakeholder management, and corporate governance.

John R. Busenbark is an Assistant Professor of Management in the Mendoza College of Business at the University of Notre Dame.

Kenneth A. Frank is a Professor in Measurement and Quantitative Methods within the Department of Counseling, Educational Psychology, and Special Education within the College of Education at Michigan State University.

Robert Gephart, PhD, University of British Columbia, is Professor Emeritus at the University of Alberta in Edmonton, Canada. Dr Gephart is the Author of Ethnostatistics: Qualitative Foundations for Qualitative Research (SAGE, 1988), Coeditor of Postmodern Management and Organization Theory (with D. Boje and T. Thatchenky, SAGE, 1996), and Lead Editor of The Routledge Companion to Risk, Crisis and Emergency Management (with C. Chet Miller and Karin Svedberg Helgesson, Routledge, 2019). Dr Gephart's research has appeared in the Administrative Science Quarterly, the Academy of Management Journal, the Journal of Management, Organizational Research Methods, Qualitative Sociology, and other outlets. Dr Gephart served as an Associate Editor of Organizational Research Methods for over a decade. He was awarded the Sage Career Achievement Award from the Research Methods Division of the Academy of Management in 2015. His current research interests include crisis management, qualitative research methods, and managing organizational change for planetary survival.

Ke Gong is a PhD Candidate in Management at the Ivy College of Business at Iowa State University. His research sits at the intersection of corporate governance and nonmarket strategy, and his dissertation examines how political factors affect the commission and detection of financial fraud. Ke has over 10 years of industry experience, including six years as a Senior Business Analyst at Intel China.

Colin Michael Hall is a Professor at the University of Canterbury, New Zealand; Guest Professor, Lund University, Helsingborg, Sweden; Visiting Professor, Linnaeus University, Kalmar, Sweden; and Docent, University of Oulu, Finland. He is the Coeditor of Current Issues in Tourism, and he has published widely on tourism, regional development, global environmental change, resilience, food, sustainability, and world heritage.

Farhan Iqbal (farhan.iqbal@uga.edu) is a Doctoral Candidate studying Strategy and Entrepreneurship in the Terry College of Business at the University of Georgia. His research focuses on the social perceptions of firms, crisis management, and the influence of business on politics and society.

Scott Johnson earned his PhD at the Carlson School of Management at the University of Minnesota and is now an Associate Professor at the Ivy College of Business at Iowa State University. His research focuses on corporate governance, managerial cognition, the philosophy of science, and research methods. He is particularly interested in improving how the theories and methodologies used in governance research represent the complexity of real organizations.

Jaewoo Jung is a Doctoral Candidate at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville (USA). His research interests lie at the intersection of organizational theory, business model innovation, and entrepreneurship. He seeks to understand how executives' and entrepreneurs' bounded rationality affects their business model innovations. More specifically, he studies why decision-makers engage in specific types of business model changes during adverse situations, such as crises. In his dissertation, he focuses on how an extreme environmental situation – the COVID-19 crisis – affects the ways business owners with different organizational conditions respond to the crisis over time. Jaewoo's main methodological interest is computer-aided text analysis, machine learning, and interpretive qualitative case study.

Margaret K. Koli is a Research Assistant and Doctoral Student at the WHU – Otto Beisheim School of Management. Her research is focused on strategies for interorganizational partnerships addressing grand challenges. Therein, her research currently focuses on the cascading of tensions within and across organizational boundaries and how this influences how actors co-strategize to address complex problems. She is affiliated with the United Nations University – Institute for Environment and Human Security, where her research interest is in partnerships for sustainable development. Margaret has also held various professional and advisory positions in other international organizations.

Ann Langley is Professor Emerita at HEC Montréal, Canada. She was Professor and Chair in Strategic Management in Pluralistic Settings at HEC Montréal until August 31, 2020 (now retired). Her research deals with strategic management processes and practices in complex organizations, with an emphasis on qualitative methodologies. She is the author of over 80 articles and has authored or edited 12 books. She is the Coeditor of the journal Strategic Organization and coedits the book series Perspectives on Process Organization Studies published by Oxford University Press.
