

Cite this article

(2020)

Award-winning paper in 2018.

Proceedings of the Institution of Civil Engineers – Urban Design and Planning 173(1): 35, <https://doi.org/10.1680/jurdp.2020.173.1.35>

Announcement

ICE Publishing: All rights reserved

Award-winning paper in 2018

Papers published in Urban Design and Planning are eligible for awards from the Institution of Civil Engineers. Papers from any of the ICE journals can be nominated for several awards. In addition, each journal has awards dedicated to their specific subject area.

On Friday 4 October 2019, ICE president Andrew Wyllie presented an award to the following papers published in Urban Design and Planning in 2018. The editorial panel nominated their best papers and an awards committee chaired by Robert Armitage allocated the awards.

Reed Mallik Prize

The Reed Mallik Prize, presented for the best paper published in Urban Design and Planning, was awarded to Wilson (2018).

Abstract

It's time to accept the fact that the world is changing very, very fast. Technology, business and social structures are rapidly evolving to meet new challenges. However, cities are slow to respond. They take time to plan, finance and construct. By the time they are built they are already out of date. In fact, using past metrics to plan future development, which continues to be the standard practice, is appearing to be a redundant model and proving to be very costly. This paper identifies ten key areas where governments, planners, investors and the individuals responsible for shaping cities, can refocus their priorities and funding in order to more effectively utilise both the limited financial and natural resources available. Entering a period of massive disruption, a paradigm shift is urgently required in the means of conceiving, delivering and managing city development.

REFERENCE

Wilson BD (2018) An outline to futureproofing cities with ten immediate steps. Proceedings of the Institution of Civil Engineers – Urban Design and Planning 171(5): 202–216, <https://doi.org/10.1680/jurdp.18.00004>.

Barry D Wilson, winner of the Reed Mallik Prize, with ICE president, Andrew Wyllie